(In the space provided below, please explain in detail the reasons for the delay in filing a proper reply)

Applicant respectfully requests revival of this application under the unavoidable standard. However, if the Patent Office does not feel that the delay was unavoidable, then in the alternative, please consider this to be a petition to revive under the unintentional standards. Applicant is paying the petition fee herein under the unintentional standard fee. If the petition is granted under the unavoidable standard, please refund the fee difference. Thank you.

The applicant had health issues arise just before the filing deadline of this utility application, and by the time the notice of missing parts was issued, applicant was recovering from open heart surgery that was performed after applicant had a heart attack in November 2001. Because of the struggle to recover from the heart surgery, applicant was unable to devote energy to working. Then in 2003, applicant attempted to begin working again, but was unable to continue that, because the travel involved was difficult. Mid 2003, the applicant injured his eye, which caused further difficulty in dealing with the health issues. The applicant was unable to work or devote attention to projects, as the eye injury repair surgery required applicant to not exert himself, so as to avoid further damage. As the attached letter from the applicant notes these various problems. Applicant is now to a point where he has recovered from these medical setbacks that he is able to attempt to begin projects again, and as such is now attempting to get this patent application back on track. Therefore, it is respectfully submitted that because of the health problems and long difficult recovery, that the delay was unavoidable. Also, the entire delay was unintentional.

Again, in the alternative, applicant would like this petition to be considered under the unintentional standard, if the Patent Office does not grant the unavoidable petition. The entire delay was unintentional. Applicant is submitting herewith a signed declaration as requested by the notice of missing parts, a credit card payment form for $1115 for the fees as follows: Basic filing fee: $385, Missing parts Fee $65, petition for unintentional revival $665.

Please contact applicant's attorney, if you have questions or if you need further information. Thank you.
